„Metropolitanka” is a her-story project, emphasizing the often neglected role of women in history. Herstories – stories told from the perspective of women are to depict the past of the metropoly and the whole Pomerania in a fuller way.

2010 – creating the project concept

2012 – execution of the project

March 2012 – starting the blog

In 2012, „Metropolitanka” focused on women connected with the Gdansk Shipyard. As a result, three different routes were established on the post-shipyard area:

route „S” – about women activists of the Solidarity route „P” – about the women workers of the Shipyard route „A” – about women artists creating in the Shipyard area

Within the project:

visiting route plans have been created walks with guides have been organized guide materials for tourists have been prepared discussion panel has been prepared

Our project has a cross-generation character and is addressed to all social groups.

We want especially to draw attention of the people interested in:

history

alternative sightseeing education

feminism

Through the project we want to:

stress the role of the women in creating history conduct informal education encourage cross-generation activities increase the interest in the history of everydayness maintain and support the memory of Gdansk Shipyard
